POLES QUESTION HIGH VOLTAGE LINE UP AGAIN MONDAY NEARLY COMPLETED

Citizens' Protest Against Removal Expected—Will Be Lengthy Session.

Monday night's session of the city council, the last one of the old body, will be one of the longest in several months, Mayor Welsh stated today, basing his prediction on the volume of routine and unfinished business ahead. Probably the most important part of the meeting will be the discussion of Ald. Hilt's proposed ordinance which would eliminate public utility poles on Center avenue, Jackson and North Franklin streets. It is understood that delegations of citizens from each of the affected thoroughfares will be present to hear the discussion and, if permitted, enter a protest against the step. What the outcome will be is a matter of conjecture.

To Elect City Officers
At the initial meeting of the 1920 council Tuesday night, their seats—Mayor Welsh and George L. Traver, from the Third and Fourth wards, respectively. Prominent among the business to be taken up that night will be the election by the council of men to fill non-elective city offices, and the annual report of the city's standing committees for the year.

Officers To Be Elected
The following officers are to be voted on: Street commissioner, city assessor, health officer, president of the council, planning inspector, city engineer, auditor, city clerk, city treasurer, and member of city planning commission. No change in the personnel of the various departments is anticipated.

Mayor Welsh will also appoint two members of the board of public works, to succeed Aldermen Mendez and Ransom whose terms expire, and a member of the fire and police commission to succeed Harry O. Nowlin.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Thomas Cullen.
Mrs. Thomas Cullen, formerly Mrs. E. C. Cullen, died at her home, 603 South Franklin street, at 3:30 o'clock Friday evening, April 16, 1920. A drive for Rock county's quota of $100,000 of the fund for buying the MacMonnies statue as a gift to France from the school children of this county, is being carried on in this county. The statue is to be given to France to commemorate the battle of the Marne and to acknowledge their gift to America, the statue of Liberty. The drive starts April 15 and will continue until April 25. It is not a forced collection, and is not intensive. Any person may donate, and the options are especially large from school children. At the end of the campaign, the names of all schools contributing will be published. The Board of Education is the depository and all funds should be sent there. The Rock county committee is made up of Arthur J. Fisher, chairman and Jeanette Howard.

PHYSICAL EXHIBIT IS GREAT SUCCESS

A number attended the physical training exhibit which was given last evening by the pupils of the School for the Blind. From the first number, musical dumb bell exercises to the last, marching, singing by all classes, every number was well given. A class of the larger boys gave free arm and leg exercises and the older girls class gave marching exercises. Intermediate pupils, the girls giving folk dances and the boys, waltzing, put on several numbers that were well received. Apparatus drill, couple waltzes and games completed the best exhibition of physical culture ever given by the school for the blind.

FORWARD, JANESVILLE!

To make Janesville a better place in which to live and in which to do business, the Gazette pledges itself to work for and support these things:

Housing survey to discourage exorbitant rentals; encouragement of building more houses; appraisal of property values so that rent profiteers may be made to pay the increased amount of taxes.

Open roads in the country 365 days of the year; better roads generally; and support of the road building plan; better streets and more paved streets in the city.

A market pavilion in the city which may also be used for many other purposes by farmers and livestock producers.

A community building to be used for auditorium, sport events, meetings, rest rooms, and also as a fitting memorial for soldiers.

Open the churches seven days a week and stop economic waste in room and time. Make basements meeting places for the young, and provide gymnasium facilities.

Build a real home for the girls who come here to work.

Open the fair grounds this year as a recreation park with tennis courts and other play apparatus. Establish parks and playgrounds.

Better the street car service as population increases.

DOING BIG THINGS WITH A CIXY FUND.

Middletown, O., a city a little larger than Janesville, has raised by popular subscription, a fund of a million dollars, for civic development. The projectors will use it to provide additions to the hospital, assist in the compensation of teachers, extend parks and playgrounds, enlarge home for girls' club, erect a community memorial building, construct a Y. M. C. A. building, and for a number of other activities. That is a good program to think over. It was raised in the same manner as the war chest. When Janesville gets the last $5 to finish the hotel subscriptions it might be a good thing to look into this as a future field of effort.

OVERALLS AND THE COST OF CLOTHING.

The overall craze has a kick back. It will increase the price of these garments for the men who wear them because they are a part of the honorable uniform of their labor. Also the craze will not last. It will die shortly, about as soon as the overalls are once sent to the wash, because man is a vain animal and likes to array himself in fine linen and garments of high cost. You can tell that when you see him selecting a necktie or fussing over the figure in a shirt. When he was a savage he had brass rings in his ears, bone strings in his nose and carved figures of gaudy snakes and rampant fictions of beasts on his hairy chest.

You can get a good pair of overalls, pants only, for $1.75, and a full uniform for $4.75 in Janesville now. The housewife can buy a gingham dress for about $3, and calico, percale and gingham for from 35 to 60 cents a yard. Ask any mother, who is the only one in the family who knows how to buy economically and carefully, about these things. The average housewife is the one who has been figuratively wearing the overalls for a long time. She has no gown left at the bottom and low at the top, with a few pieces of filmy goods in between known as style, costing many dollars. Man has about as much judgment, ordinarily, about buying as a child with a new silver dollar loose in a candy store. Chicago papers tell of a man who wore an overall suit on the boulevard of the rich and with this severe, castigating protest against high costs, sported a hat costing $15, a silk shirt, $20, and a $2 silk handkerchief. Its absurdity is apparent. With a pair of overalls and $28.65 worth of silk, shoes and fine linen, the move to protest the cost of clothes surely lacks synchronous similitude.

EARLY CENSUS FIGURES.

There has been much disappointment in the census reports from Wisconsin cities so far. The figures would not seem to bear out the fear that the population was moving to urban centers and the rural districts would eventually be depopulated. In fact the rural sections are growing more and the cities less. Only one city, Madison, has shown a considerable increase in population. There the increase was 13,000. In Sheboygan it was 4,000; Oshkosh, 100; Stevens Point, almost entirely a rural trading center, 2,500; Marshfield, 1,500; Menasha, a little more than 1,000, and Waupaca had a growth of exactly 60. Even Milwaukee was disappointed. We are soon to know what has happened in purely rural communities and we predict there will be some surprises as to those sections which 10 years ago were wilderness and outover lands, especially in the neighborhood of the Chippewa river valley. The older villages and smaller cities dependent on trade from a farming community and not changed by the addition of industry, have not and probably will not show a great growth. Waupaca is an instance. While it is a better business town than it was ten years ago, because the automobile has made it nearer to the farmer and he can come and go and do business and have whatever pleasures it affords, without having to move there with his family. Suburban cities and villages show a population increase as may be expected from the greater ease with which business is reached, and because of the comforts of the residences in the outlying districts.

THE MARNE MONUMENT.

Rock county has been asked to raise $100 for the Marne memorial. To commemorate the work of the men of the American army who stopped the German army at the Marne and started the Huns back to the Rhine, a monument is to be designed by the noted American Frederick MacMonnies, and erected on the banks of the river near Chateau Thierry. Wisconsin has more than a passing interest in the monument. Here the men of the 32nd division received their first terrible baptism of fire and here they have left their dead. In the fields from the Marne to the Vesle the German army learned what "Les Terribles" meant. There should be no difficulty in obtaining this sum. Green county has already turned in more than its quota. Only small sums are wanted—nickels, dimes and quarters.

THE ONLY HOBO LEFT ON EARTH.

Hayward, the secretary of the I. W. W., until the United States government got him for revolutionary conspiracy, has issued a statement about his "One Big Union." Hayward represents the nomads of labor. They work only when they have to. Until the war they were the hoboes of the nation, lawless vagrants, personally known to police, constables and sheriffs.

It is this organization backed by the bolsheviks of Russia, who are attempting to put the skilled labor and

SPRING FEVER.

The simplest tasks seemed hard to do,
I dragged my way about the place,
I felt all right, and yet I knew
I feared the work I had to face;
The children seemed to worry me,
And that was a sign of something's wrong,
I thought of dreadful things to be—
And then I heard a robin's song.

I scolded over little things
And stopped the youngsters at their play
It seemed my nerves were jumping springs,
For I was finding fault all day;
My hands would not obey my will,
I had no relish for my food,
I lost my cunning and my skill,
And I was in a bitter mood.

Then green appeared upon the trees
And robin sang the day with song,
And from the south there came a breeze
Which brought the scent of flowers along;
I turned my back upon it all,
Dropped every task and stole away,
And went where neither door nor wall
Make prisoners of human clay.

I watched the white clouds drifting by
And heard the chirruping of birds,
Found pictures to delight the eye
And heard no sound of selfish words;
I spent a day with trees that know
Far more than man has ever learned,
And I could hear my birdie sing,
And smile once more, when I returned.

the ambitious artisan of the country into the class with the lazy vermin of the hobo army and line them up with the moujiks and square heads who have no desires beyond the purely physical—no family and no home other than a room or a flop, and no baggage to impede a quick get-away. Hayward has the temerity to say that his efforts toward the "One Big Union" have been with the strikers of the railroads and the discontented men in other industries. He will not get far.

It is inconceivable that the real representatives of labor will join forces with an organization both distasteful and destructive. Think of the intelligent men of Janesville who are workers in the trades following the leadership of a self-made vagabond who the day before was asking for a hand-out at the back door of that Janesville workman's home! And yet that is what Hayward's idea means, in his "One Big Union."

There is room in the presidential lists for one more candidate. The only qualification he needs is whiskers. So far we have no man in the race with the lace curtains. Ham Lewis does not want to be president, or his pink lambskins would add a little picturesqueness to the otherwise dull scene. Never before have we had a campaign without whiskers. It is very careless of some one eligible under the forest preservation act not to be in. How does Mr. Hughes feel about it?

What's the use of these overall clubs? Get something the women can join. Then see the prices skip-up.

It may be all right to flout a college education, but there are about fifty presidential candidates who would like to get a diploma from the electoral college.

How can a man grovel in a $15 pair of shoes?

Their Opinions

We are not given to complimenting unless we feel the compliment is deserved, but after reading the Janesville Gazette more or less of the time for about fifty years, we feel competent to say a word in its favor. Looking back to our childhood, we remember the old Gazette as it then looked, not as large a paper as at the present time and not a daily, but as a weekly, was looked forward to as a means of learning the news of the county for the week and well did it cover the field. Of late years as a daily it has steadily risen as a gatherer and distributor of the state, general and local news, until today there are, we believe, few if any papers in Wisconsin which give better news service including the national and foreign news each day as late as 3 p. m. besides the county, neighborhood and local happenings. As an all around newspaper it stands at the head of the papers in Wisconsin.—Albany Vindicator.

You might say that these New York socialists were fired with patriotism.—Richmond (Ind.) Item.

The need of a national budget system long has been recognized, yet the adoption of the plan for this nation has been delayed until the delay well-nigh has become a public scandal. Experiences during the recent war served to call fresh attention to this need, however, and the indications are that the present congress will not adjourn without making provision for a budget system. The house of representatives already has approved such a measure, and although it differs in some respects from the plan proposed by the senate committee, if the senate adopts the plan now prepared all differences between the two plans doubtless will be adjusted in conference, meaning the final adoption of a genuine budget system. And the only wonder is, that congress has waited so long before agreeing to this plan, which cannot fail to be of material advantage and benefit to the government, and of corresponding advantage to the American people as a whole.—Oshkosh Northwestern.

Backward Glimpses

FORTY YEARS AGO

April 17, 1880.—Several young people of this city and members of the Guards, went to Beloit last night to attend the dance given by the guards of that city. They all reported a good time, dancing until four o'clock this morning.—Mrs. G. F. Griswold is back in Janesville after spending two years abroad. She is now visiting with Mrs. C. B. Conrad.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

April 17, 1890.—Alex. McAlpin has moved his stock of harnesses to larger quarters at No. 20 North Main street. He has been in the harness business in Janesville for over twenty years.—The Fire Police gave their annual party last night in the armory, it being in the form of a "Beggars' Ball." About 400 attended.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

April 17, 1900.—Winston Brothers, contractors of Minneapolis, have secured the contract for building the railroad, a branch of the St. Paul line from here to Nippesunk, Ill. It will be known in Janesville as the Janesville Southwestern line. The contractors will begin work at once. They will put several steam-shovels on for the digging.

Autobiography of Black Hawk

He was again fired on by several guns and badly wounded. He found that he would be murdered, (if not mortally wounded already), and sprang at the nearest man to him, seized his gun, and shot him from his horse. He then fell, covered with blood from his wounds, and almost instantly expired!

"The other hunters, being in the rear of Ma-ta-tah, seeing that the whites were so near, and that they could not escape, they were pursued, and nearly all the party murdered! My youngest brother brought me the news in the night, he having been with the hunters, and got but slightly wounded. He said the whites had abandoned their cattle, and gone back towards the settlement. The remainder of the night was spent in lamenting for the loss of our friends at daylight I chief. I met him at the gate, and told him what had happened. His countenance changed; I could see sorrow depicted in his face for the death of my people. He tried to persuade me that I was mistaken, as he 'could not believe that the whites would act so cruelly. But when I convinced him that the whites were not mistaken, he had murdered my people should be punished.' I told him that my people would have revenge—that they would not trouble any of his people of the fort, as we did not blame him or any of his soldiers—but that a party of my braves would go towards the Wabasha to avenge the death of their friends and relations. The next day I took a party of hunters and went several days, and let the fort gate as I passed."

Here Gomo ended his story. I could relate many similar ones that have come within my own knowledge and observation; but I dislike to look back and bring on sorrow afresh. I will resume my narrative.

The great chief at St. Louis having sent word for us to go down and confirm the treaty of peace, we did not tarry, but started immediately, and we might smoke the peace pipe with him. On our arrival, we met the great chiefs in council. They explained to us the words of our Great Father at Washington, accusing us of heinous crimes and divers misdemeanors, particularly in not coming down when first invited. We knew very well that our Great Father had deceived us, and we refused to join the British and assist in the war which he had put this speech into the mouths of these chiefs to deliver to us. I was not a civil chief, and consequently made no reply; but our chiefs told the commissioners that "what they had said was a lie!"—that our Great Father had sent no such speech, he knowing the situation in which we had been placed had been caused by him! The white chiefs appeared very angry at this reply, and said they "would break off the treaty with us, and go to war, as they would not be insulted."

Our chiefs had no intention of insulting them, and told them so—"that they merely wished to explain to them that they had told a lie, without making them angry; in the same manner that the whites do, when they do not believe what is told them." The council then proceeded, and the pipe of peace was smoked.

Here, for the first time, I touched the goose quill to the treaty—not knowing, however, that, by that act, I consented to give away my village. Had that been explained to me, I should have opposed it, and never would have signed their treaty; as my recent conduct will clearly prove.

What do we know of the manner of the laws and customs of the white people? They might buy our bodies for dissection, and we would touch the goose quill to confirm it, without knowing what we are doing. This was the case with myself and people in touching the goose quill the first time.

We can only judge of what is proper, and right by our standard of right and wrong, which differs widely from the whites. If I have been correctly informed, the whites may do bad all their lives, and then, if they are sorry for it when about to die, all is well! But with us it is different; we must continue throughout our lives to do what we conceive to be good. If we have corn and meat, and know of a family that have none, we divide with them. If we have more blankets than sufficient, and others have not enough, we must give to them that want. But I will presently explain our customs and the manner we live.

We were friendly treated by the white chiefs, and started back to our village on Rock river. Here we found that troops had arrived to build a fort on Rock Island. This in our opinion was a contradiction to the treaty we had done—to prepare for war in time of peace. We did not, however, object to their building the fort on the island, but we were very sorry, as this was the best island on the Mississippi, and had long been the resort of our young people during the summer. It was our garden (like the whites) plums, apples, strawberries, blackberries, gooseberries, and other sorts of different kinds; and its waters supplied us with fine fish, being situated in the rapids of the river. In my early life, I went many happy days on this island. A good spirit had care of it, who lived in a cave in the rocks immediately under the place where the fort now stands, and has often been seen by our people. He was white, with large wings like a swan's, but ten noise in that part of the island which he inhabited, for fear of disturbing him. But the noise of the fort has since driven him away, and no doubt a bad spirit has taken his place!

Our village was situated on the north side of Rock river, at the foot of its rapids, and on the point of land between Rock river and the Mississippi. In its front, a prairie extended to the bank of the Mississippi; and in our rear, a continued bluff, gently ascending from the prairie. On the side of this bluff we had our cornfields, extending about two miles up, running parallel with the Mississippi; where we joined those of the People whose village was on the bank of the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of Rock Island, and three miles distant from ours. We had about eight hundred acres in cultivation, including what we had on the islands of Rock river. The land around our village, uncultivated, was covered with blue-grass, which made excellent pasture for our horses. Several fine springs broke out of the bluff, near by, from which we were supplied with good water. The rapids of Rock river furnished us with an abundance of excellent fish, and the land, being good, never failed to produce good crops of corn, beans, pumpkins, and squashes. We always had plenty—our children never cried with hunger, nor our people were never in want. Here our village had stood for many years, the undisputed possessors of the valley of the Mississippi, from the Ouisconsin to the Portage des Sioux, near the mouth of the Missouri, being about seven hundred miles in length.

About Your Watch

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington, April 17.—A watch is the most delicate bit of apparatus with which the average person is on familiar terms. Some of the secrets are so tiny that it is said a thimble would hold 100,000 of them. Its springs and pivots are so fragile that the watch falls only to the ground if its chain or they may be injured. Yet most of us are no more careful of the sensitive mechanism of our watches than we are of a jack knife, purse, or anything else that goes in our pockets.

Fed Watch Buter.

We are inclined to smile pityingly at the poor old Mad Hatter in "Alice in Wonderland" when his watch refuses to go after a liberal dose of butter. It is not so funny, however, as it seems. Best points out the quality of a timepiece depends on the amount of special work put on it, and not entirely the number of jewels.

Jewels Not Main Thing.

The Bureau of Standards says that few people who watch intelligently are obsessed with the idea that accuracy and the number of jewels are the same thing. As a matter of fact, the number of jewels in a watch is not a measure of its quality. The quality of a timepiece depends on the amount of special work put on it, and not entirely the number of jewels.

What of the Jewels?

This part of the mechanism is important, but no more so than some other parts.

"A well made 17 jewel watch can keep better time than a 23 jewel watch," says the Bureau of Standards. "The quality of a timepiece depends on the amount of special work put on it, and not entirely the number of jewels."

Handle With Care.

Then, a good watch doesn't take kindly to being used as a combination tooth cutter and rattle by the baby. It isn't keen on playing tennis, and it is not to be gulped by the child. If you go swimming with it on your wrist. Every three years it needs to be cleaned up and given an oil rub by a capable repairer. It is not by an amateur with a pin. To various indignities it will submit for a time, according to its workmanship, but eventually it will quit.

Hits It Within Hours.

The degree of care your watch deserves depends on its value. As a time-keeper. If you merely like to know about what time it is, you can stand a certain degree of rough handling, and continue to tell you the approximate time. Unfortunately, if you really want your watch to keep correct time, it will not stand rough handling. It follows the rules set down by the Time Section of the Bureau of Standards. The first and most important rule is that it is a regularity. You should wind it at definite times, preferably in the morning, though if night is more convenient, it will do almost as well. Winding in the morning is advocated on the ground that the spring can better stand the changes and jolts of daytime use when it is recently wound, but whatever you do, just how you choose stick to it. The habit of absently giving the stem a few twirls whenever you look at the time is bad.

Wrist Watch All Right.

Along the same line of keeping your watch on a schedule is the effect of varying positions. If it is worn for practical purposes, it is on a swinging chain, where it will bounce about and bang against the furniture. On a woman's watch, the Bureau of Standards says, "A man will get best results by carrying his timepiece in his pocket, in a watch case to prevent it from turning over."

Likes Regular Habits.

"Theoretically, the best place for a watch is horizontal," says Mr. Beal, time expert of the Bureau of Standards. "But no one can carry his watch that way in the daytime. The important thing is to keep the treatment uniform to my possible hours each day, and so many hours flat each night. If the treatment is systematic, and the watch will run uniformly, then by regulation you bring it to a small rate of daily change, and it will stay constant."

Depends on Moving.

"A watch will run off several minutes in a few days for two reasons," he continued. "First, if it possesses a large difference of rate in different position, and second, if it is not kept the same number of hours each day in its customary positions, the error will accumulate.

"A good watch will have about 10 or 12 seconds variation from the slowest to the fastest rate in any position—dial up, dial down, or any vertical position except with the stem down. Quite frequently watches are sold which are so slow that the position error is considerably above one hundred seconds a day."

Many Watches Tested.

The business man, railroad employee, or any one else who wants a timepiece that he can rely on is advised to inquire into the accuracy of the watch he is buying, as to its difference of rate in various positions and temperatures. The Bureau of Standards suggests that the purchaser of an expensive watch ask the salesman if it has passed the government test, and if so, ask him to send their best watches to the bureau to be tested, and sell them with their certificates.

Those desiring information may write a letter to the Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclose a stamp. The letter will be answered by the bureau.

Q. How many delegates will there be in the democratic national convention?
A. W. A.

Q. There will be 1,022 delegates in this convention, which will meet in San Francisco or Oakland on June 28. Of this number it will require 728 votes to elect a candidate for the presidency. A democratic convention requires a two-thirds vote, while the republicans nominate by agreement of a majority.

Q. Who was the American colonel who was killed during the Boxer uprising?
A. L. F.

Q. Who was Col. E. H. Liscum of the Ninth United States Infantry who was killed during the uprising at Tientsin on July 13, 1900.

Q. When was the waltz first danced?

Q. The waltz is of French origin but was adopted and modified in Germany so that it is usually identified with that country. It became popular on the continent early in the 19th century and was introduced into England in 1812.

Q. When was congress first opened by prayer?
A. C. H. L.

Q. The Rev. Henry M. Couden, who is rounding out a quarter of a century as chaplain of the house of representatives, says that one of the first acts of the Continental congress was to provide for the opening of all sessions of congress with prayer by divine assistance.

Q. What becomes of the 10 cents paid for a special delivery stamp?
A. V.

Why Their Telephones Wouldn't Work---

Just a few cases of telephone "trouble"—and what the troubleman found:

The baby had experimented on the receiver cord with the scissors; cook had attempted to restore the electrical connection by tying together the ends of the cord!

The bells wouldn't ring—because father, wanting quiet for a nap, had stuffed the gongs with a towel, and had forgotten about it.

An office telephone was "dead." A vase of flowers had been upset on the desk and all the cords on the desk telephone were water-soaked and had quit business.

A farm line telephone "out of order." Mister Farmer had stored his metal spectacle case on top of his wall telephone; it lay against the exposed binding posts and short-circuited the line.

Yes, such things do happen; often than you may think. The telephone is a sturdy little instrument, but it can't stand everything—and the Company is not always to blame!

The car door opened and Billy jumped out. He hurriedly opened the chain-bolt and he bounded in with a "What do you think?" and dragged me along the hall, out of earshot of the door, and then cried in an excited whisper: "Your mossos has fled the coop!"

Billy flung his hat on the table and repeated his words: "Your mossos has fled the coop—do you hear?" "For I had been too astonished to say anything when I heard them the first time."

"Gone—bag and baggage! Evaporated! Took a carriage and told the driver the Waldorf."

"Then he's not gone very far," I remarked, "without thinking, only to ask scornfully: "Do you suppose I haven't been there already? I tell you he's lit out for parts unknown—that's the size of it. I want to know what he's doing. He left the hotel at seven in the morning—seven, mind you, before anybody was out of bed. He hadn't registered at the Waldorf. But he said he hasn't registered at any of the other big hotels. I got a hunch he's got some new scheme on and there's no use looking for him in New York. Do you imagine he would go to Washington on his own hook—with his daughter and all—and lay the case before the president?"

"Suppose he has!" I cried, and then I added: "That would be almost too good to be true."

"Yes—I feel that way—I kind-a don't seem to feel that he did any harm doesn't say he did. But say—I've been figuring it out coming up on the sub—your mossos is laying a new trap for you and Mrs. Delacroix. I know one of your two women has got the diamonds—she knows it in his boots, no matter what you say—and anyway you have. He knows you've got 'em—and wouldn't dare sell or tell. See? That's where he's got you; and he knows you're both of you shaking in your boots."

"I'm shaking, all right—I've had my fill of diamonds!" I admitted bitterly.

"And that's how he argues. He's only got to give you a scare, and he's sort-of—well, and I bet you, too, you get your scare inside an hour."

"Perhaps I've had it already!" I cried, suddenly recollecting my mysterious detective, whom I had forgotten in this new development of affairs, and I told Billy the story. But when I came to my suspicions that it was Claire the man was after Billy, I stopped dead in a heap on the spot.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "It might be!" and for some minutes he sat there, squeezing his hands and glaring at the floor. Suddenly Mrs. Thing-downstairs began, rendering her Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" of a pig on one, and Billy turned up in irritation and paced the floor. "I was glad of her performance—it was a gratuitous contribution to the safety of conversation in my own flat."

"Tell me again everything your detective man said," commanded Billy. "And you're sure he's a tec?"

"I'm not sure of anything!" I returned. "I had nothing to go on but what he said and what I guessed. He may have been a fancy burglar—a literary burglar, after my last pool—such things have happened." I saw Billy's lip curl at this frivolous suggestion, but I ran on. "He may be a gentleman crook—someone who notices that I had an interest in the girl and is using it now to get in here and map the grounds for a crime."

"Oh, don't joke," he begged disconsolately. "This is awfully serious. Why couldn't this man—you say you think he's a burglar? Why couldn't he be the emperor's follow-up? Now, why?"

"He could," I said. "That's what he is! And 'mossos' got wind of his last night and scooted for the tall timber! The emperor wouldn't just hand 'mossos' a box of cigars like that and tell him just to take 'em and present 'em with his compliments—they don't do things that way over here. He'd send a second man to see that the first man did his job according to contract. And why isn't this the man?"

"It did look possible—though I couldn't still see why he had begun his acquaintance with me—telling me a lie about Claire. While I was wondering over it, Billy remarked: 'Poor De Ravenel has got his troubles all right. He knows the old man's after him and he's lost the goods. Say, you can afford to pity him now.'"

A wave of utter despair swept over me. I know of nothing more unliking than the facetious nonchalant of the young man in face of a serious situation. I was ready to weep. I was saved from it by the ringing of the front bell.

I put up the chain-bolt before I opened it—I had sense enough for that—and then I cried: "You!" and received a sharp: "Let me in quick!"

of the descendants of our very best families. A most comforting discovery. I can assure you.

As I began to think back on all of Jack's mandates to me, and of his constant command that I remember the fact that I am engaged to him now, and therefore mustn't be seen with Tom, Dick and Harry, for his sake as well as mine, I grew rather resentful. How could he have the effrontery to dictate to me, when he himself was doing the very thing that he had asked me not to do, innumerable times? Men are funny creatures. They have lots to learn, and I feel somehow that Jack is going to learn his full quota from me, despite my nineteen years and inexperience.

I must say that I kept my presence of mind beautifully, for one so young. Truth to tell, I found myself curious to catch a glimpse of Jack's charmer. (Occasionally I revert to type.)

Of course I controlled this unladylike desire promptly, and with my most enchanting smile continued my conversation with Braxy. We were soon deep in the evolutions of the modern woman, her changed position in the world, and just what its effect would be on the family life of the future, etc.

Braxy is so interesting when he gets started on this subject. Jack will never even discuss it, not with me, at any rate. But I am beginning to see that there are ever so many things that a fiancé will not do with the object of his affections that he will do and discuss with some other "older furt." Let us call her! You see I don't know the girl's name, hence the sarcasm.

Braxy seems to think that matrimony is a great joke on the two parties involved. Especially if they are young. He says that no two people can vow to love each other indefinitely, at any rate, and he held to strict account for such a rash promise at fifty. That is, not very many. It's against all natural needs, instinct, and delicacy. I never thought of it in this light but there may be something in it, after all.

Pretty soon, my curiosity overcame me, and I stretched my head to get a good look at Jack and that girl. He was holding her very close, and looking down into her eyes as though he knew her very well. I felt something tighten in my throat. The girl was much smaller than he, and very pretty. They danced beautifully.

Braxy noticed my agitation, and asked me what was the matter, and I told him. He shrugged his shoulders and held my hand. "Poor little Lindsey, we are a bad lot, we men, I'm afraid."

But I smiled as bravely as I could, and assured him that I was quite happy, and that Jack's affairs were minor matters to me, in spite of our engagement.

Braxy is so interesting when he gets started on this subject. Jack will never even discuss it, not with me, at any rate. But I am beginning to see that there are ever so many things that a fiancé will not do with the object of his affections that he will do and discuss with some other "older furt." Let us call her! You see I don't know the girl's name, hence the sarcasm.

Braxy seems to think that matrimony is a great joke on the two parties involved. Especially if they are young. He says that no two people can vow to love each other indefinitely, at any rate, and he held to strict account for such a rash promise at fifty. That is, not very many. It's against all natural needs, instinct, and delicacy. I never thought of it in this light but there may be something in it, after all.

Pretty soon, my curiosity overcame me, and I stretched my head to get a good look at Jack and that girl. He was holding her very close, and looking down into her eyes as though he knew her very well. I felt something tighten in my throat. The girl was much smaller than he, and very pretty. They danced beautifully.

Braxy noticed my agitation, and asked me what was the matter, and I told him. He shrugged his shoulders and held my hand. "Poor little Lindsey, we are a bad lot, we men, I'm afraid."

But I smiled as bravely as I could, and assured him that I was quite happy, and that Jack's affairs were minor matters to me, in spite of our engagement.

My next thought was that my escapade with Braxy was nothing out of the ordinary after all. This sort of thing was "being done" by the descendants of our very best families. A most comforting discovery. I can assure you.

As I began to think back on all of Jack's mandates to me, and of his constant command that I remember the fact that I am engaged to him now, and therefore mustn't be seen with Tom, Dick and Harry, for his sake as well as mine, I grew rather resentful. How could he have the effrontery to dictate to me, when he himself was doing the very thing that he had asked me not to do, innumerable times? Men are funny creatures. They have lots to learn, and I feel somehow that Jack is going to learn his full quota from me, despite my nineteen years and inexperience.

I must say that I kept my presence of mind beautifully, for one so young. Truth to tell, I found myself curious to catch a glimpse of Jack's charmer. (Occasionally I revert to type.)

Of course I controlled this unladylike desire promptly, and with my most enchanting smile continued my conversation with Braxy. We were soon deep in the evolutions of the modern woman, her changed position in the world, and just what its effect would be on the family life of the future, etc.

Art and Economy in Home Building

No. 37—Submitted by the National Builders' Bureau, Spokane, Washington.

Sensible Five-Room Dwelling-Bungalow Type

This trim little house has a front of 26 feet, is 37 feet in depth, to which add an 8-foot porch with sturdy, graceful brick pillars. Has stone foundation, frame, with wide extending roof; exterior is brown stain with light trim.

The interior arrangement is excellent, from the housewife's point of view, two large bedrooms with bath between opening off a short hall, with linen closet and clothes closet opposite, all on one side of the floor, with living room, dining room and modern kitchen on the other side.

Living room has fireplace with book shelf space on either side; dining room has broad opening connecting with living room, all rooms having ample light.

Full-sized basement, and planned for hot water heating.

This home is simple, yet dignified, and is arranged with an eye to the comfort of the occupants and economy of upkeep.

The merchants on this page will cooperate with you in every way possible—They will take care of your home problems—and are ready to serve you at all times.

Art Craft Roof--

Durable, Beautiful, Economical

Art-Craft Roofs are lasting, weather-defying roofs.

Art-Craft Roofs are roll roofs with a natural green or red slate surface. On this slate surface is an attractive tile design.

No use to tear off old shingles when ART CRAFT will go on right over them and make the best roof you can put on today—and do it for less money.

Art-Craft over the old shingles makes a warm roof and a cool roof. It doesn't conduct either heat or cold. It makes a double roof—one that lasts, one that cuts coal bills, one that makes more comfortable sleeping rooms in summer.

Let us give you an estimate on an Art-Craft Roof for your house.
